Many retailers offer a credit card shop, but not all of them are worth having. The cards that made GOBankingRates a list of the best store credit cards represent the cream of the crop, and they all have benefits that Closer. Use this guide to help you discover the best store credit cards available now, as well as which store credit cards are easy to obtain. Which stores offer credit cards? The store's credit card offers exclusive rewards and discounts for a particular store. Nearly all major retailers have store credit cards, including Macy's, Dillard's, Kohl's, Home Depot and Walmart.Closed-Loop Cards vs. Open-LoopStore-branded cards that don't have Mastercard, Visa, American Express or Discover are examples of lock-in credit cards. Lock-in cards are only accepted at the retailer that issued them, such as Lowe's or Target.Open-loop cards, co-coded with the store name and a large credit card network. You can use them in-store and everywhere mastercard, Visa, American Express or Discover credit cards are accepted. Capital One Walmart Awards Mastercard and Amazon Premier Visa Signature Card Awards are open-ended options. Lock-in cards focus on discounts and special access events for a particular store. Open-ended cards, however, can provide perks such as zero- or low-interest balance transfers, insurance, extended warranty and fare rewards. Every time you buy something or get gas, you earn a reward that you can later redeem at Costco.You will receive a reward for a cash refund in the form of an annual reward certificate that can be applied to your In-Store Costco purchases. The wait is long, but consider how much your reward certificate can cost after a year of gas and purchases. Should I keep credit cards? Getting a store credit card might be a good idea. If you're a loyal retail customer, you can grab some serious discounts and bonuses by getting approval for a store card. And while store cards are not always the best value, they can help build or renew your credit. Many store cards, including Amazon maps, have an instant approval process. However, cards that offer the best prices often require a FICO credit score of 670 or higher. Even if you have marginal points, there are store credit cards for fair credit. Store credit cards without a credit history and store credit cards for bad credit also available. However, a card that is easier to claim may have higher interest rates and a lower credit limit. What to consider when choosing a Store credit card when you decide on a store credit card, see if it offers the following features: Exclusive cardholder preferences such as special promotions, free shipping, discounts or extended refund policies No annual fees and competitive interest rates, so the costs don't offset any loyalty rewards earned by Easy Access online and/or the convenient Can Store Credit App Store credit cards can affect your credit score if you don't manage your accounts wisely. For example, your credit scores may suffer if your loan usage is too high or you open and close too many accounts. Here are some important things to look out for when using a store credit card. Avoid redundancyNot you should overfubscine or carry a balance just to earn more rewards or perks. Pay the balance in full each month to avoid accruing interest that can offset any earned rewards. Make timely payments and avoid making BalanceAlways payments on time without doing so, it can cost you expensive late fees and affect your credit. Todd Christensen, Education Manager at Money Fit, has good advice on how to stay on top of your account: Never leave the store without repaid the entire balance on the customer service desk in the first place. Understand the difference between deferred and 0% interest-only, not the same as 0 per cent interest. If you are offered 0% interest, no interest will be added to your balance during the promotional period Deferred interest means that if you repay the remainder of the funds by the end of the promotional period, you are not owed any interest. Otherwise, interest will begin to be accrued. Avoid Maxing Out low-limit credit cardsStores credit cards often come with low credit limits that can be maximize on a single trip. According to the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, you should Use a loan of no more than 30% of your total credit limit to avoid being hit by your credit score. So, if you have a card with a $500 limit, don't spend more than $150.Store Credit cards offer exclusive discounts and rewards at your favorite retailers Don't leave money on the table when you shop at your favorite retailers. Having a store credit card can give you exclusive access to discounts and benefits you may not get if you just pay in cash. Before you sign up for a card, make a comparison of the store's credit cards to make sure you're getting the best deal. In addition, spend responsibly and pay the card balance in full monthly to avoid the cost of high interest rates.The information is accurate as of October 22, 2020. Tariffs and fees may be raised.
